Resources and trainings to successfully prevent and treat opioid use disorder. All in one place. All evidence-based. At no cost.

What is the Providers Clinical Support System?

Providers Clinical Support System (PCSS) is a federally funded initiative by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration providing evidence-based educational resources, mentorship, and training at no cost. PCSS is a coalition of national professional organizations, led by the American Academy of Addiction Psychiatry, that provides the knowledge and guidance for primary care clinicians to care for their patients.

Our mission is to provide trainings in the evidence-based prevention, identification and treatment of all substance use disorders, particularly opioid use disorder (OUD).

What does PCSS provide?

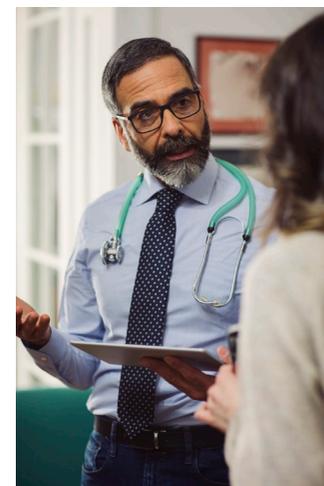

Our dedicated team of clinical experts have developed a comprehensive repository of materials and trainings that are readily available at no charge. PCSS provides:

- Live and archived webinars
- Modules
- MAT waiver trainings
- Podcasts
- Clinical resources
- Clinical mentoring
- Access to specialists in addictions and pain
- Core curriculum on treating pain
- Core curriculum on treating substance use disorders.

Supporting Your Clinical Needs

Primary care clinicians are on the front line of treating substance use disorders and co-occurring mental disorders. This is why it is vital that all clinicians are trained in the continuum of care of opioid use disorder.

PCSS can help you navigate the complex systems and clinical approaches that come with preventing and treating all substance use disorders. Teams of PCSS clinical experts are working with clinicians across the country, providing clinical expertise, education, and training needed for providing effective care.

Opioid use disorder can be successfully treated. And being part of a patient's journey to recovery is incredibly rewarding.
